The French cooperation services agreed to send the 160 teachers, which is four times the current number of the assistants. They are men fulfilling military service by being placed on cultural cooperation missions in French-speaking countries around the world.

The attorney said the State of Louisiana would meet the expenses of the mission.

He also said he discussed here the new pilot programs for teaching of French in 12 parishes, which the Louisiana government plans to undertake.

He said the CODOFIL program has the purpose of making Louisiana a "window of the relations among the French-speaking world" and to better relations among the French.
