La. abortion laws voided, federal court ruling says

NEW ORLEANS (AP) - A three-judge federal panel on Friday invalidated laws in Louisiana and at least one other state, declaring they were unconstitutional and enforced discrimination against women seeking abortion services.

The ruling impacts the state's Abortion Act, which the Louisiana Supreme Court upheld in 1979. The act requires doctors to have admitting privileges at hospitals and mandates that abortions are performed within medically necessary limits.

The panel was divided in its opinion, with two judges dissenting.

The Louisiana Attorney General's office has not yet announced whether it will appeal the decision.
