Acadian Ambulance Service

Air Med One

Campaign kickoff

Acadian Ambulance adds "copter service

Lafayette - A banquet here last week commemorated the tenth anniversary of Acadian Ambulance Service Inc., and officially opened the company's new medical helicopter program.

The event honored J.R. Rayburn Bertrand, who as mayor of Lafayette in 1971 was one of the public officials whose early support and support in the state helped bring the service here.

The service, established in 1971, has gained significant attention in emergency transportation and medical service in the last six years.

Mr. Bertrand said he was pleased with the new service, and spoke about the importance of medical transportation.

The company's chairman of the board, Richard Zunich, said that while the service has grown, it has always been important to maintain a close relationship with the community.

Mr. Zunich emphasized the importance of community involvement and support in the success of the service.

The need for a medical helicopter service was identified in the early 1970s, and the city of Lafayette and the state legislature approved funding for the service.

The new helicopter, named "Acadian Med One," will provide medical transportation for patients in need of specialized care, including trauma patients, cardiac emergencies, and newborns.

The service is staffed by highly trained medical professionals, including physicians, nurses, and flight nurses.

The helicopter is equipped with the latest technology, including life-support equipment and communication systems.

The service has been well-received by the Lafayette community, and has received positive feedback from patients and families.

The success of the service is attributed to the commitment of the company's leadership and the dedication of the staff.

The service has continued to evolve and expand, providing medical transportation to patients throughout the region.

As the service continues to grow, it remains committed to serving the community and providing the highest level of care possible.