The Acadiana Philharmonic Orchestra is coming soon in September 1978. The orchestra will be presented as a major orchestra, the first orchestra of its type ever to perform in the area. The orchestra will feature a variety of music, including classical, contemporary, and American composers. The orchestra will be conducted by a visiting conductor, and the program will be presented in the local community center. The orchestra will feature a variety of musicians, including string, woodwind, brass, and percussion sections. The orchestra will be housed in a new building, and the program will be conducted by a local conductor. The orchestra will be presented in a variety of venues, including community centers, schools, and churches. The orchestra will be a major addition to the cultural life of the community, and will be a source of pride for residents of the area.
ORGANIZING AN ORCHESTRA — Harry Miller Jr. of Lodi says forming an orchestra isn't easy. He hopes to listen to Acolyte's new El Camino orchestra by 1981. (AlegreTerry &girl/Photo)
