Bid to be taken on new A&A building

The new art and architecture building will be the first building in the state built only for art and architecture, according to Wilbur Starr, head of the Art and Architecture Department. The building will be located at the corner of Woodson Street and Girard Park Drive. Bids on the building are due November 20, with construction beginning 30 days later. The state legislature appropriated $570,000 for the $2,280,000 building.

The three departments of the Art and Architecture Department will be in the new building. Presently the art and architecture classes meet in nine buildings. The new three story building will total 17,500 square feet.
