Bilingual Academic Review
Announced By CODOFIL

The Council for the Development of French in Louisiana (CODOFIL) announced the establishment of a bilingual academic review for international distribution.

Entitled Revue de la Louisiane — Louisiana Review, the publication was created by the CODOFIL Academic Advisory Board comprising all the colleges and universities represented by the chairman of their foreign language departments and the State Department of Education's foreign language supervisor. Details of the Review were worked out by the Board's executive committee composed of Homer Dyess, foreign language supervisor, State Department of Education; Drs. James Redfern, Carlos Fandall, Elmore DeGrange, Richard Chandler, foreign language chairmen at Louisiana State University, Northeast, Southern and Southwestern; and Dr. Francis Lawrence, chairman, department of French and Italian, Tulane University.

Purpose of the Review is "to deal with language, literature, history, culture, social science, to encourage an exchange of views in the interest of international understanding and, particularly, to promote French language and literature along with universal values deriving from other national cultures," CODOFIL Chairman James Domengeaux said.

The Editorial Board consists of Drs. Redfern; Mathé Allain, Southwestern; Marie-Louise Lagarde, LSU-New Orleans; Mary Metz, LSU-Baton Rouge; Roch Mirabeau, Southern; Frank Morgan, Northeast; Ulysses Saucedo, Dillard; and Edward Sneed, Grambling.

Three Times A Year

Funded and distributed by CODOFIL under the supervision of Professor Leandre Page, founder of the bilingual Canadian academic review, Revue de l'Université Laurentienne — Laurentian University Review, the publication will appear three times a year and will contain articles by eminent academic personalities from the United States, especially Louisiana, from Canada, especially Quebec, and from other foreign countries.

First issue will be released in April, 1972.
