Business leaders feel worst of economic troubles over.

According to a majority of business leaders in Acadiana who were surveyed by UL's Center for Business, the area's economic troubles are serious. In a few months from now, the state's economic troubles are expected to continue. The majority of respondents believe that the area's economic troubles are worse than other areas in southeast Louisiana. As a result, many business leaders are calling for more economic diversification, which they believe will help the area's economy.

The survey, conducted by the Center for Business, found that the majority of business leaders in Acadiana believe that the area's economic troubles are worse than other areas in southeast Louisiana. The survey also found that many business leaders are calling for more economic diversification, which they believe will help the area's economy.

Furthermore, business leaders feel that the state's economic troubles are worse than other areas in southeast Louisiana. The survey also found that many business leaders are calling for more economic diversification, which they believe will help the area's economy.