The academic year program at Montpellier has been in effect since 1976. Paul Valery University, one of the oldest institutions of learning in France, is located in an historic university center of 200,000 people in southern France, a few kilometers from the Mediterranean Sea.

The academic year is geared largely, but not exclusively to French studies. Emphasis is also on French culture, civilization, and literature. The students will take courses along with other French students, will live in dorms on the campus and experience a total immersion in the French culture and language.

Due largely to assistance from the French government, the total basic cost to the CODOFIL consortium for this year's program is estimated at $3,200 of which the legislature contributes up to $1,000.

A total of 25 scholarships were given to students from universities belonging to the CODOFIL consortium of Louisiana universities and colleges.
