In your paper of Oct. 17, 1971, on page 64, you had a big full page advertisement about a 127-acre swampland playground called Cajun Country. Was it ever built, or what happened?

J. S. K.—Lafayette

A group of about five investors in Lafayette tried unsuccessfully to get Cajun Country off the ground. The proposed amusement-tourist attraction was to be built on the acreage south of the Lafayette airport, but the investors couldn’t get enough backing from other local investors and the project folded. Investors gave up on Cajun Country last year.
