Howard DeRouen takes apart the Boudreaux family sign that was used in the Tintamarre. A Tintamarre is an Acadian tradition of marching through one’s community making noise with improvised instruments and other noisemakers, usually in celebration of National Acadian Day.

Below: Philip Frey, right, fires a black powder musket Sunday during Acadian Culture Day at Vermilionville in Lafayette. Activities included Palmetto weaving, trapping and muskets, Cajun dance lessons and music. Left: Cajun dance instructor Harold Bernard, center, of Glide Studios, teaches 12-year-old Grace Rider the waltz.
More photos, 2B.

Advocate Photos by Brad Kemp