Acadians from Canada Praise State Before Departure from Orleans

NEW ORLEANS -- A delegation of French Canadians, working under the supervision of Dr. Ernest A. Dupont, president of the Institut de la Recherche et de la Société Nationale d'Uranium, has arrived in New Orleans to make a tour of the state and to confer with local officials.

The delegation, which consists of ten members, will visit several cities in Louisiana, including New Orleans, Baton Rouge, and Lafayette. They are scheduled to return to Canada on February 10.

The delegation's tour was arranged by the Canadian government and is part of a larger program to promote cultural exchange between Canada and the United States.

The delegation's visit is expected to bring increased attention to the Acadian heritage in Louisiana and to foster greater understanding between the two countries.
