There was a little bit of everything going on at the grand opening of Catfish Town Wednesday. While some folks watched entertainment that varied from skits to symphonies to rock bands, others were more interested in keeping cool in the sweltering sun by either consuming large quantities of soft drinks and beer or taking a dip in the fountain. City police, including the mounted police, also helped control the crowd of about 250,000, and some people chose to show their patriotism in a unique way.
