This beautiful plot in the Carencro cemetery is similar to a small portion of Arlington cemetery. It is here that the Carencro war dead are buried.

The small community of Carencro lost 13 men in the past war. These men fell on widely scattered points of the globe, but today they are buried side by side in an outstanding section of Carencro's beautiful cemetery.

On the day of All Saints, five years after the conflict, Carencro's war veterans—120 strong and most of the Catholic population of Carencro attended mass in honor of these war dead. Marching procession through the cemetery to the small plot in which the fallen heroes are buried, they placed a wreath in memory of the supreme sacrifice. Their chaplain, the Rev. A. M. Wanner offered a prayer for the repose of their soul—for them the battle is over.

Over 500 Catholics gathered at the Carencro Catholic Church last Tuesday for the mass which was said in honor of the thirteen men who lost their lives in the past war. The people in front of the church were unable to find so much as standing room inside.
