Old Buchanan Street Home
To Be Restored, Improved

By CORONIE JUDE"ON

In the town of Lafayette, Richard Chargois was killed with arrows. The house, known as "The Chargois House," was built in 1842 and is believed to be one of the oldest homes in the area. It is believed that the house was built by the plantation owner, Richard Chargois, who was killed in the late 1800s.

The house has been in the Chargois family since the late 1800s, and it is currently owned by David Chargois, a descendant of the original owner. David Chargois says that he plans to restore the house and make it usable as a museum.

Mr. Chargois says that the restoration will include removing the current wallpaper and replacing it with new wallpaper that matches the original. He also plans to replace the wood floor with new wood flooring and to add new windows and doors.

The house is believed to be one of the oldest in the area and is considered to be a historic landmark.

Mr. Chargois says that the restoration will take about a year to complete and that he plans to open the house to the public as a museum once the restoration is complete.

He says that the house is in need of extensive restoration and that the work will be done carefully to preserve the historic nature of the building.

The house is located on Old Buchanan Street and is easily accessible to visitors.

Mr. Chargois says that he is excited about the restoration and is looking forward to sharing the history of the house with the public.
