LAFAYETTE — Thousands of concertgoers from Canada and Acadia saw 1995 Convention's final concert, a tribute to the music and dance styles of Acadiana.

Chantal Dugas and her son, Jacques, N. of New Brunswick, enjoy the concert.

The Cri du Béarn was the highlight of the night, with a combination of traditional music and modern dance. The performance was a tribute to the culture of the Acadian community.

"The Cri du Béarn was a beautiful performance," said a concertgoer. "The music and dance were both incredible."

Other highlights included a performance by the popular band, La Nouvelle Orléans. The band played a mix of traditional and contemporary music, creating a lively atmosphere.

The concert ended with a rousing rendition of "La France," performed by the entire audience in unison. The performance was a fitting conclusion to a memorable event.
