The Louisiana Crawfish Farmers Association will hold its 10th Annual Producers Meeting on Tuesday, September 30, at the Holiday Inn North in Lafayette.

The one-day program will begin at 9 a.m. with a session designed for the beginning producer. Technical presentations will discuss profits, water quality, processing and current research results.

The meeting will also include a panel of processors and producers discussing various innovations in their respective production facilities.

Eastern Division President John Thibaut and Western Division President Ricky Broussard pointed out that the meeting will also have commercial booths for crawfish equipment suppliers. Producers will be able to see the latest in traps, wires, pumps and harvesting machines.

They stress that the meeting is an opportunity for crawfish farmers to hear and meet crawfish researchers and farmers from the state, ask questions about their research projects and farming operations, and get answers to individual production problems.
