Acadiana Neuf's Acting Director To Resign Post

The acting director of Acadiana Neuf, Peter Vallot Jr., announced today his resignation effective March 1. Vallot was named acting director by the board of directors of the six-parish anti-poverty agency to replace Roland M. Hebert who resigned Jan. 1. Vallot had previously been assistant director.

The Acadiana Neuf board of directors follows:

"I am hereupon submitting my resignation as Acting Director of Acadiana Neuf Incorporated, effective March 1, 1967. This is not to say that I am not personally committed to the goals as set forth in the War on Poverty. I firmly believe that the program potentially can do much to alleviate the root cause of poverty. With the proper philosophy, funds, and involvement significant progress can be made in achieving economic and social dignity for the impoverished. I have been involved in the War on Poverty in different capacities for approximately two years. The work has been interesting and challenging. However, because of the instability of the program and family obligations, I must seek employment which provides a greater degree of stability."
