DIRTY WORK — While learning how archaeologists work, this amateur is discovering that getting dirty is part of the job. Looks like he’s enjoying it. None of the students participating in the summer project seemed to mind the dirt, as long as it covers Indian artifacts. The students found about 100 artifacts in an exploratory search on an Indian mound’s surface. Digging began Monday despite threatening thunderstorms. (Photo by P.C. Piazza)