'D. E.' Aids Parish Students
In Future Business World

A new training program known as "Distributive Education" has been in operation in the Lafayette Parish schools for the past several months. This program is designed to prepare students for future business careers.

At Lafayette High, 24 students are enrolled in the program, which is taught by Miss Elizabeth Abraham, a business teacher at the school. The program consists of two parts: a classroom component and a practical application component.

The classroom component includes subjects such as business law, accounting, and economics. The practical application component involves hands-on experience in various business settings.

One of the main goals of the program is to provide students with the skills and knowledge needed to succeed in the business world. By combining theoretical knowledge with practical experience, students are better prepared to enter the workforce after graduation.

Students are required to complete a certain number of hours in various business settings, such as retail stores, banks, and insurance agencies. This hands-on experience helps students understand the real-world implications of the concepts they learn in the classroom.

In addition to the classroom instruction, students are encouraged to participate in extracurricular activities such as business clubs and competitions. These activities provide opportunities for students to network with professionals in the field and gain additional experience.

Overall, the "Distributive Education" program at Lafayette High is an excellent option for students interested in pursuing a career in business. It provides a comprehensive education that prepares students for success in the workplace.
