The novel was the beginning of a love affair with Acadian life and a desire to share it with others. Elaine Crump, who grew up in Lafourche Parish in South Louisiana, moved there after she retired from writing. "It was just right for me," she said. "I love the people, the history, the culture."

Crump, who has written several books on Acadian history, recently published a novel called "The Acadian Village," which tells the story of a French Acadian family who move to Louisiana in the early 1800s. The novel is set in the Acadian Village, a non-profit organization dedicated to preserving the history and culture of the Acadian people.

"The Acadian Village is a place where people come to learn about the history and culture of the Acadians," Crump said. "We have a museum, a library, and we hold events and programs throughout the year."

The novel is a love letter to the Acadian people and their way of life. "I wanted to tell the story of the Acadian people from a personal perspective," Crump said. "I wanted to tell the story of the people, not just the history."

The novel is available at several bookstores in the Acadian Village, and on Amazon. The novel has received positive reviews from readers who have enjoyed the way Crump tells the story of the Acadian people and their way of life.
