A four week program of Immersion into an authentic French atmosphere is being offered by the Council for the Development of French in Louisiana (CODOFIL) and will be held in French-speaking Quebec Province from June 27 until July 25. It is open to all students and others wishing to improve their French language.

Seventy participants, 17 years of age and over, will be accepted for the College of Jonquiere, situated in the Lac St. Jean region, 120 miles north of Quebec City. The college of Riviere-du-Loup is accepting 25 students, 14 to 16 years of age. This campus is located 110 miles northeast of Quebec City on the majestic St. Lawrence River and on the doorstep of the scenic Gaspe Peninsula.

Classroom Instruction
The program will consist of classroom instruction in the morning, followed by activities, workshops and sports in the afternoon and evening. College and high school credit is given to all participants. "The program is especially well suited to particularly improve their conversational French," said James Domingueaux, Chairman of CODOFIL. "The set-up at Jonquiere is effective ... because the Quebecois are attuned to the needs of youngsters of American background and upbringing. At the same time, there is no compromise with academic standards: students are exposed to linguistic and cultural situations in French, which are absolutely authentic."

The populace of both regions is French-speaking. Total cost of the program is $495. This low cost is made possible by a substantial grant from the Quebec Government's Ministry of Education. The one-month CODOFIL program is a joint endeavor between the Louisiana and Quebec Governments spanning all levels of language training in French. It is endorsed by the Academic Advisory Board comprising all Heads of Foreign Languages of the States colleges and universities and the State Department of Education.
