French Symposium To Have Architect

"Architecture in French Colonial Louisiana" will be discussed by Samuel Wilson, Jr., noted New Orleans architect, at 10 a.m. Tues., April 27 in the USL Union Theatre, according to Mrs. Mathie Allain, chairman, of the USL Festival Symposium Committee. The public is invited to attend.

Wilson, a member of the Tulane faculty and a lecturer on Louisiana architecture, is speaking in Lafayette in conjunction with the "France and North America Festival ... Three Centuries of Dialogue Symposium" being held on the University of Southwestern Louisiana campus April 26-30 under the sponsorship of USL, the USL Union and the Council for the Development of French in Louisiana.

The symposium is one more effort to further the recognition of the French heritage of this area and the current movement to preserve Louisiana's French culture.

Tulane Graduate

Wilson, a native of New Orleans, is a graduate of the Tulane School of Architecture. He was awarded the Edward Langley Scholarship by the American Institute of Architects in 1938 for study and travel in Europe, through Great Britain, Germany and the Scandinavian countries; doing research on origins of Louisiana Architecture in France. He also traveled in Mexico in 1952, and
