With the Gulf of Mexico lapping at their creosoted Feet, cabins at Holly Beach await the inevitable. Hurricanes and erosion have taken their toll on the area, and most people have long given up trying to maintain cabins. At high tide the gulf is only yards away, and the beach itself is a forlorn stretch littered with plastic bottles, rusty cans and rotting fish carcasses.