NEW IBERIA, La.—A statue of an Attakapas Indian on the church square in St. Martinville will be dedicated Sunday, Nov. 5, during a day-long celebration. This announcement was made Thursday by Allen Durand, chairman of the St. Martinville Civic Improvement Association.

Principal speaker will be former Mayor of New Orleans, de-Lesseps Morrison, who is now serving as ambassador of the Organization of American States.

Bishop Maurice Schexnayder of the Lafayette diocese and other church dignitaries have indicated that they will attend the observance.

The calendar of activities for the day will include a 10:30 a.m. parade with the Breaux Bridge and St. Martinville High school bands in the line of march as well as the Boy Scouts and other local organizations.

A noon banquet will be served. Unveiling of the statue and the appearance of former Mayor Morrison is set for 2 p.m.

Officials who will attend are Congressman Edwin E. Willis, state comptroller Roy Theriot, Secretary of State Wade O. Martin Jr., Sen. Elmore F. Bonin, Sidney Gray, former mayor of Lake Charles who is executive director of the Louisiana Municipal Association, and University of Southwestern president, Joe Fletcher.
