LAFAYETTE, La., June 28. (AP) - Louisiana's loveliest and least known people, the Cajuns, are coming out of their shell. They are being honored and respected by the people of the state and receiving new recognition by the outside world. The Cajuns are a people who are unique in their own way, and they are proud of their heritage.

The Cajuns, who are descended from French settlers, are the smallest of the five major racial and cultural groups in Louisiana. They are mostly farmers and fishermen, and they speak French.

The area where the Cajuns live is called the Acadiana, a region of about 1,000 square miles in southwestern Louisiana. It is bordered by the Atchafalaya Bay and the Mississippi River.

The Cajuns have a rich cultural heritage, and they are proud of their history. They are known for their music, dance, and food.

The Cajuns are also known for their loyalty to their French language and culture. They have preserved their French language and culture for generations, even though they were forced to leave their homeland in France.

The Cajuns have a unique way of life, and they are proud of their heritage. They are known for their hospitality and their love of family and community.

The Cajuns are also known for their love of the outdoors. They enjoy hunting, fishing, and exploring the beauty of the Acadiana.
