New Orleans, La., Apr. 29 (AP) - The American Medical Association (AMA) approved a resolution calling for the establishment of a national program to improve the quality of health care in the United States. The resolution, which was introduced by Dr. John D. Rock of Minnesota, points out that the current system of medicine is not only inadequate but also inefficient. The AMA resolution urges Congress to enact legislation to ensure that all citizens have access to quality medical care.

The resolution states that the current health care system is characterized by fragmented care, high costs, and unequal access. It calls for a comprehensive approach that includes improvements in both the delivery of care and the financing of health care. The AMA believes that a national program is necessary to address these issues and to move towards a more equitable and effective system.

The resolution was approved by a vote of 277-140, with 10 abstentions. It now moves to the House of Delegates for ratification.
