LeBlancs: a very popular worldwide family fixture

By GENE BROWNS

Longtime residents of the Beaufort area, the LeBlanc family is one of the most prominent in the world. According to the census, the LeBlanc family is one of the largest in Louisiana, with more than 100,000 descendants worldwide.

According to the LeBlanc family, their roots date back to the pre-Civil War period. They believe they are descendants of the original settlers of the area.

The family is well known for their contributions to the community, including their involvement in local politics and their philanthropic work.

LeBlanc family members have been involved in various community events, such as the annual LeBlanc Family Reunion, which attracts people from all over the world.

The LeBlanc family has also been involved in various charitable organizations, including a local food bank and a children's hospital.

The family's success has been attributed to their strong work ethic and their commitment to their community.

Brothers Boots LeBlanc and Freddy LeBlanc took center stage at Friday's edition of the Living Traditions in Beaufort to discuss the popularity of the LeBlanc family—descendants of near 20,000 households worldwide.
