Reality And Romance

Acadian Memorial in St. Martinville tells the whole story of Acadian culture.

1997 JANE BLITZER

The city of St. Martinville gave the Acadian Memorial Foundation the old city hall building, abandoned since the mid-1960s, for the Acadian Memorial. The building sits high on a hill, overlooking the bayou. The city hall was the site of many Acadian political meetings and functions. The city hall has been restored and now contains the Acadian Museum Foundation, the Acadian Historical Society, and the Acadian Preservation Society.

The Acadian Museum Foundation, housed in the old city hall, exhibits many artifacts and memorabilia related to Acadian history and culture. The museum contains a wealth of information about the Acadian people and their heritage.

The Acadian Historical Society, located in the old city hall, is dedicated to preserving and promoting Acadian history and culture. The society sponsors a variety of events, including the annual Acadian Festival, which celebrates Acadian culture and traditions.

The Acadian Preservation Society, also housed in the old city hall, is committed to preserving and maintaining the Acadian Memorial Foundation's buildings and properties. The society works to ensure that the Acadian Memorial Foundation's buildings and properties are maintained and preserved for future generations.

The Acadian Memorial Foundation is a non-profit organization dedicated to preserving and promoting Acadian history and culture. The foundation owns and operates the Acadian Museum Foundation, the Acadian Historical Society, and the Acadian Preservation Society.

The Acadian Memorial Foundation's mission is to educate the public about Acadian history and culture and to preserve the Acadian Memorial Foundation's buildings and properties. The foundation receives funding from private donations and government grants.

The Acadian Memorial Foundation's buildings and properties include the old city hall, which is now the Acadian Museum Foundation; the Acadian Historical Society Building; and the Acadian Preservation Society Building.

The Acadian Memorial Foundation's buildings and properties are located in St. Martinville, Louisiana, in the heart of Acadian country. The Acadian Memorial Foundation is dedicated to preserving and promoting Acadian history and culture and to ensuring that the Acadian Memorial Foundation's buildings and properties are maintained and preserved for future generations.
Acadianes and the Creoles

The city of St. Martinville grew the Acadian Memorial Foundation for the old city hall building, which was turned into an historic landmark. The town is a center of the Acadian culture and people celebrate annual festivals in honor of this heritage. The city offers a wealth of attractions for tourists and locals alike. The Acadian and Creole cultures are an integral part of this unique community. The town offers a variety of cultural activities, such as music and theater performances, art exhibits, and festivals. The town is also known for its delicious cuisine, which is a blend of Acadian and Creole flavors. The town has preserved its history and culture, making it a popular destination for those interested in learning more about the Acadian and Creole heritage. The Acadian and Creole cultures are celebrated through various events and activities throughout the year, and the town offers a unique experience for those who visit. The Acadian and Creole cultures are an important part of the town's identity and are celebrated with pride. The town is a great place to visit for those interested in learning more about the Acadian and Creole heritage.