Memorial model goes on display at capitol

RENO VOLKMAN
St. Martin Bureau Editor

DAYTON ROUSE - An Acadian Memorial model donated to the city of St. Martinville by woodworker John Allen Legleis was placed in a prominent location at the State Capitol in Baton Rouge.

Located on the ground floor of the State Capitol, near the front entrance to the House wing, the model is accompanied by a large display including the Acadian Memorial Foundation literature.

Legleis's model took about 100 hours to complete and was displayed at the 2008 Louisiana State Fair next to the original Acadian Memorial. It was then sent to the city of St. Martinville, where it was displayed at the State Capitol, the Acadian Cultural Center, and the Acadian Museum.

Legleis's model is a faithful reproduction of the original model and includes a map of Acadian Louisiana in 1800, a timeline of Acadian history, and a list of Acadian landmarks.

The model was crafted from wood and is a testament to the ingenuity and creativity of Acadian culture. It serves as a reminder of the contributions of the Acadian people to Louisiana's history.

The Acadian Memorial Foundation, founded in 1977, is dedicated to preserving and promoting Acadian culture and history. It is located in St. Martinville and is open to the public.

The model on display at the State Capitol is a proud display of Acadian heritage and a testament to the resilience and spirit of Acadians.

Memorial model goes on display at capitol

RENO VOLKMAN
St. Martin Bureau Editor

DAYTON ROUSE - An Acadian Memorial model donated to the city of St. Martinville by woodworker John Allen Legleis was placed in a prominent location at the State Capitol in Baton Rouge.

Located on the ground floor of the State Capitol, near the front entrance to the House wing, the model is accompanied by a large display including the Acadian Memorial Foundation literature.

Legleis's model took about 100 hours to complete and was displayed at the 2008 Louisiana State Fair next to the original Acadian Memorial. It was then sent to the city of St. Martinville, where it was displayed at the State Capitol, the Acadian Cultural Center, and the Acadian Museum.

Legleis's model is a faithful reproduction of the original model and includes a map of Acadian Louisiana in 1800, a timeline of Acadian history, and a list of Acadian landmarks.

The model was crafted from wood and is a testament to the ingenuity and creativity of Acadian culture. It serves as a reminder of the contributions of the Acadian people to Louisiana's history.

The Acadian Memorial Foundation, founded in 1977, is dedicated to preserving and promoting Acadian culture and history. It is located in St. Martinville and is open to the public.

The model on display at the State Capitol is a proud display of Acadian heritage and a testament to the resilience and spirit of Acadians.

Memorial model goes on display at capitol

RENO VOLKMAN
St. Martin Bureau Editor

DAYTON ROUSE - An Acadian Memorial model donated to the city of St. Martinville by woodworker John Allen Legleis was placed in a prominent location at the State Capitol in Baton Rouge.

Located on the ground floor of the State Capitol, near the front entrance to the House wing, the model is accompanied by a large display including the Acadian Memorial Foundation literature.

Legleis's model took about 100 hours to complete and was displayed at the 2008 Louisiana State Fair next to the original Acadian Memorial. It was then sent to the city of St. Martinville, where it was displayed at the State Capitol, the Acadian Cultural Center, and the Acadian Museum.

Legleis's model is a faithful reproduction of the original model and includes a map of Acadian Louisiana in 1800, a timeline of Acadian history, and a list of Acadian landmarks.

The model was crafted from wood and is a testament to the ingenuity and creativity of Acadian culture. It serves as a reminder of the contributions of the Acadian people to Louisiana's history.

The Acadian Memorial Foundation, founded in 1977, is dedicated to preserving and promoting Acadian culture and history. It is located in St. Martinville and is open to the public.

The model on display at the State Capitol is a proud display of Acadian heritage and a testament to the resilience and spirit of Acadians.