New Orleans Plays Host To Acadians

NEW ORLEANS, La. — Acadiana's Creole culture is celebrated annually in a tradition of French-speaking Creole culture. The celebration includes a parade, a cultural festival, and a reenactment of the Acadian exodus. This year, the New Orleans Semi-Fest was held to honor the Acadian heritage and its contributions to Louisiana and American culture. The event included a grand parade, a festival with food and music, and a reenactment of the Acadian exodus. The celebration was supported by local businesses and organizations, and attended by thousands of people from across the country.
