One of the more interesting landmark homes in this area, both from the standpoint of its architecture as well as from the Olivier family connection with the house, is the Olivier Plantation House, formerly known as the Olivier Plantation House. It is said to stand on the site of an even earlier house built as a typical French settler's plantation house with the lower floor of brick and the upper floor of cypress. A pecan tree was on either side.

The present historically significant house on the old Olivier Plantation House has been recommended for inclusion on the National Register of Historic Places. It is off Louisiana Highway 93 leading to Arnaudville about three miles south of Grand Coteau in the area known as Prairie des Trous. The area is populated chiefly by Olivier, who called the "de Venin" part of their name. The forebearers of the Olivier and Prairie families in St. Landry Parish were the brothers Pierre Francois Marie Olivier De Vein and Marie Josephine Gatineau Jupille.

The Olivier Plantation House Dates Back To Year 1842

by MARIO MAMALAKIS
Special Features Writer

One of the more interesting landmark homes in this area, both from the standpoint of its architecture as well as from the Olivier family connection with the house, is the Olivier Plantation House, formerly known as the Olivier Plantation House. It is said to stand on the site of an even earlier house built as a typical French settler's plantation house with the lower floor of brick and the upper floor of cypress. A pecan tree was on either side.

The present historically significant house on the old Olivier Plantation House has been recommended for inclusion on the National Register of Historic Places. It is off Louisiana Highway 93 leading to Arnaudville about three miles south of Grand Coteau in the area known as Prairie des Trous. The area is populated chiefly by Olivier, who called the "de Venin" part of their name. The forebearers of the Olivier and Prairie families in St. Landry Parish were the brothers Pierre Francois Marie Olivier De Vein and Marie Josephine Gatineau Jupille.

The Olivier Plantation House Dates Back To Year 1842

by MARIO MAMALAKIS
Special Features Writer

Olivier Plantation House Dates Back To Year 1842

by MARIO MAMALAKIS
Special Features Writer

One of the more interesting landmark homes in this area, both from the standpoint of its architecture as well as from the Olivier family connection with the house, is the Olivier Plantation House, formerly known as the Olivier Plantation House. It is said to stand on the site of an even earlier house built as a typical French settler's plantation house with the lower floor of brick and the upper floor of cypress. A pecan tree was on either side.

The present historically significant house on the old Olivier Plantation House has been recommended for inclusion on the National Register of Historic Places. It is off Louisiana Highway 93 leading to Arnaudville about three miles south of Grand Coteau in the area known as Prairie des Trous. The area is populated chiefly by Olivier, who called the "de Venin" part of their name. The forebearers of the Olivier and Prairie families in St. Landry Parish were the brothers Pierre Francois Marie Olivier De Vein and Marie Josephine Gatineau Jupille.

The Olivier Plantation House Dates Back To Year 1842

by MARIO MAMALAKIS
Special Features Writer

Olivier Plantation House Dates Back To Year 1842

by MARIO MAMALAKIS
Special Features Writer

One of the more interesting landmark homes in this area, both from the standpoint of its architecture as well as from the Olivier family connection with the house, is the Olivier Plantation House, formerly known as the Olivier Plantation House. It is said to stand on the site of an even earlier house built as a typical French settler's plantation house with the lower floor of brick and the upper floor of cypress. A pecan tree was on either side.

The present historically significant house on the old Olivier Plantation House has been recommended for inclusion on the National Register of Historic Places. It is off Louisiana Highway 93 leading to Arnaudville about three miles south of Grand Coteau in the area known as Prairie des Trous. The area is populated chiefly by Olivier, who called the "de Venin" part of their name. The forebearers of the Olivier and Prairie families in St. Landry Parish were the brothers Pierre Francois Marie Olivier De Vein and Marie Josephine Gatineau Jupille.

The Olivier Plantation House Dates Back To Year 1842

by MARIO MAMALAKIS
Special Features Writer

Olivier Plantation House Dates Back To Year 1842

by MARIO MAMALAKIS
Special Features Writer

One of the more interesting landmark homes in this area, both from the standpoint of its architecture as well as from the Olivier family connection with the house, is the Olivier Plantation House, formerly known as the Olivier Plantation House. It is said to stand on the site of an even earlier house built as a typical French settler's plantation house with the lower floor of brick and the upper floor of cypress. A pecan tree was on either side.

The present historically significant house on the old Olivier Plantation House has been recommended for inclusion on the National Register of Historic Places. It is off Louisiana Highway 93 leading to Arnaudville about three miles south of Grand Coteau in the area known as Prairie des Trous. The area is populated chiefly by Olivier, who called the "de Venin" part of their name. The forebearers of the Olivier and Prairie families in St. Landry Parish were the brothers Pierre Francois Marie Olivier De Vein and Marie Josephine Gatineau Jupille.