AT NATION'S CAPITOL — During the recent pilgrimage to the home of their ancestors, these South Louisiana Cajun lovelies, with Former Senator Dudley J. LeBlanc of Abbeville, were greeted on the steps of the United States Capitol in Washington by two Louisiana congressmen. The group of girls includes Miss Laura Lucia Massie, Abbeville, left on second row; Miss Brenda Thibodeaux, Erath, fourth from left on third row; and Miss Vivian Couvillon, Kaplan, standing to the right of third row. Congressman Hale Boggs of New Orleans, Majority Whip of the House of Representatives, at LeBlanc's left, and Congressman Edwin E. Willis of St. Martinville, to LeBlanc's right, spoke to the Cajun girls and their chaperones, then posed for photographs on the Capitol steps. Complete in the raiment of their ancestors in Nova Scotia (then called Acadia) over two centuries ago, the Acadian lassies also met President Kennedy at the White House on their two-day visit to Washington. Following their visit to the Nation's Capital, the South Louisiana group continued on their pilgrimage to the home of their ancestors in Nova Scotia where they visited Grand Pre, then Moncton, New Brunswick, and Montreal and Quebec in Canada. LeBlanc, who is President of the Association of Louisiana Acadians, led the pilgrimage to Canada. The former State Senator had taken two similar groups of Cajun girls to Washington to meet Chief Executives. In 1936, LeBlanc took the Acadian lassies to meet President Franklin Roosevelt, and six years earlier in 1930, he escorted them to visit with President Herbert Hoover.
