In Cow Island and neighboring Forked Island, one in 15 are living with cancer. No one knows why, but locals suspect it's arsenic in the water. At the center of the mystery, and in the heart of the community is St. Anne's Church, where arsenic levels have tested the highest in the area. For those who live here, it is affecting everything they do. This is their story.