Two Reapportionment Issues Set for Final House Vote Today

Continued from Page 1

BY JAMES H. GILUS

TWO bills providing for reapportionment of the state Senate and House of Representatives which already have passed the Senate will be up for passage in the House Thursday.

The House Wednesday received a favorable report, without major amendments, on Senate Bill 67, providing for Senate reapportionment, from its Judiciary C Committee. On the preceding day the committee had reported favorably Senate Bill 65, providing for House reapportionment.

Among the amendments to the House reapportionment bill which the committee approved Tuesday were a series of changes providing for election of 10 Jefferson Parish representatives from single-member districts instead of from the parish at large.

The House adjourned until 9:30 a.m. Thursday. Prior to adjournment it accepted committee amendments to the two reapportionment bills and advanced both of them to third reading and final passage.

Among its actions on the floor, the House Wednesday gave 89-to-0 approval to Senate Bill 7 by New Orleans Sens. Miriam O'Keefe and Frederic L. Eagan, a proposed constitutional amendment authorizing the Orleans Levee Board to levy a two-and-a-half-mill property tax to finance Orleans Parish's portion of the cost of providing a hurricane protection system on Lake Pontchartrain. The bill was handled by New Orleans Rep. Edward F. LeBreton Jr. Having passed both legislative houses, the proposal will be submitted to the voters in the Feb. 1 general election.

FAVORABLE 12-4 VOTE

The House Judiciary C Committee reported Senate Bill 67 reapportioning the Senate favorably by a vote of 12 to 4.

One of the amendments approved was Senate amendment which added the word "and" resulted in giving two voting districts.

By JAMES H. GILUS

TWO bills providing for reapportionment of the state Senate and House of Representatives which already have passed the Senate will be up for passage in the House Thursday.

The House Wednesday received a favorable report, without major amendments, on Senate Bill 67, providing for Senate reapportionment, from its Judiciary C Committee. On the preceding day the committee had reported favorably Senate Bill 65, providing for House reapportionment.

Among the amendments to the House reapportionment bill which the committee approved Tuesday were a series of changes providing for election of 10 Jefferson Parish representatives from single-member districts instead of from the parish at large.

The House adjourned until 9:30 a.m. Thursday. Prior to adjournment it accepted committee amendments to the two reapportionment bills and advanced both of them to third reading and final passage.

Among its actions on the floor, the House Wednesday gave 89-to-0 approval to Senate Bill 7 by New Orleans Sens. Miriam O'Keefe and Frederic L. Eagan, a proposed constitutional amendment authorizing the Orleans Levee Board to levy a two-and-a-half-mill property tax to finance Orleans Parish's portion of the cost of providing a hurricane protection system on Lake Pontchartrain. The bill was handled by New Orleans Rep. Edward F. LeBreton Jr. Having passed both legislative houses, the proposal will be submitted to the voters in the Feb. 1 general election.

FAVORABLE 12-4 VOTE

The House Judiciary C Committee reported Senate Bill 67 reapportioning the Senate favorably by a vote of 12 to 4.

One of the amendments approved was Senate amendment which added the word "and" resulted in giving two voting districts.