The School Board on Thursday called an election for April 29 to ask voters to continue two small property taxes that generate about $5.3 million a year.

The board has been collecting the two millages for 20 years and wants to renew the taxes for another 10 years. One is a 2.9-mill tax to pay for additional teachers above the state allotment, and a 1.94-mill tax for employee salaries and benefits. Both generate about $5.3 million for the school system's general fund budget.

The board has been collecting the two millages for 20 years and wants to renew the taxes for another 10 years.

One is a 2.9-mill tax to pay for additional teachers above the state allotment, and a 1.94-mill tax for employee salaries and benefits. Both generate about $5.3 million for the school system's general fund budget.

The board has been collecting the two millages for 20 years and wants to renew the taxes for another 10 years.

One is a 2.9-mill tax to pay for additional teachers above the state allotment, and a 1.94-mill tax for employee salaries and benefits. Both generate about $5.3 million for the school system's general fund budget.

The board has been collecting the two millages for 20 years and wants to renew the taxes for another 10 years.

One is a 2.9-mill tax to pay for additional teachers above the state allotment, and a 1.94-mill tax for employee salaries and benefits. Both generate about $5.3 million for the school system's general fund budget.

The board has been collecting the two millages for 20 years and wants to renew the taxes for another 10 years.

One is a 2.9-mill tax to pay for additional teachers above the state allotment, and a 1.94-mill tax for employee salaries and benefits. Both generate about $5.3 million for the school system's general fund budget.

The board has been collecting the two millages for 20 years and wants to renew the taxes for another 10 years.

One is a 2.9-mill tax to pay for additional teachers above the state allotment, and a 1.94-mill tax for employee salaries and benefits. Both generate about $5.3 million for the school system's general fund budget.

The board has been collecting the two millages for 20 years and wants to renew the taxes for another 10 years.

One is a 2.9-mill tax to pay for additional teachers above the state allotment, and a 1.94-mill tax for employee salaries and benefits. Both generate about $5.3 million for the school system's general fund budget.

The board has been collecting the two millages for 20 years and wants to renew the taxes for another 10 years.

One is a 2.9-mill tax to pay for additional teachers above the state allotment, and a 1.94-mill tax for employee salaries and benefits. Both generate about $5.3 million for the school system's general fund budget.

The board has been collecting the two millages for 20 years and wants to renew the taxes for another 10 years.

One is a 2.9-mill tax to pay for additional teachers above the state allotment, and a 1.94-mill tax for employee salaries and benefits. Both generate about $5.3 million for the school system's general fund budget.

The board has been collecting the two millages for 20 years and wants to renew the taxes for another 10 years.

One is a 2.9-mill tax to pay for additional teachers above the state allotment, and a 1.94-mill tax for employee salaries and benefits. Both generate about $5.3 million for the school system's general fund budget.

The board has been collecting the two millages for 20 years and wants to renew the taxes for another 10 years.

One is a 2.9-mill tax to pay for additional teachers above the state allotment, and a 1.94-mill tax for employee salaries and benefits. Both generate about $5.3 million for the school system's general fund budget.

The board has been collecting the two millages for 20 years and wants to renew the taxes for another 10 years.

One is a 2.9-mill tax to pay for additional teachers above the state allotment, and a 1.94-mill tax for employee salaries and benefits. Both generate about $5.3 million for the school system's general fund budget.

The board has been collecting the two millages for 20 years and wants to renew the taxes for another 10 years.

One is a 2.9-mill tax to pay for additional teachers above the state allotment, and a 1.94-mill tax for employee salaries and benefits. Both generate about $5.3 million for the school system's general fund budget.

The board has been collecting the two millages for 20 years and wants to renew the taxes for another 10 years.

One is a 2.9-mill tax to pay for additional teachers above the state allotment, and a 1.94-mill tax for employee salaries and benefits. Both generate about $5.3 million for the school system's general fund budget.

The board has been collecting the two millages for 20 years and wants to renew the taxes for another 10 years.

One is a 2.9-mill tax to pay for additional teachers above the state allotment, and a 1.94-mill tax for employee salaries and benefits. Both generate about $5.3 million for the school system's general fund budget.

The board has been collecting the two millages for 20 years and wants to renew the taxes for another 10 years.

One is a 2.9-mill tax to pay for additional teachers above the state allotment, and a 1.94-mill tax for employee salaries and benefits. Both generate about $5.3 million for the school system's general fund budget.

The board has been collecting the two millages for 20 years and wants to renew the taxes for another 10 years.

One is a 2.9-mill tax to pay for additional teachers above the state allotment, and a 1.94-mill tax for employee salaries and benefits. Both generate about $5.3 million for the school system's general fund budget.

The board has been collecting the two millages for 20 years and wants to renew the taxes for another 10 years.

One is a 2.9-mill tax to pay for additional teachers above the state allotment, and a 1.94-mill tax for employee salaries and benefits. Both generate about $5.3 million for the school system's general fund budget.

The board has been collecting the two millages for 20 years and wants to renew the taxes for another 10 years.

One is a 2.9-mill tax to pay for additional teachers above the state allotment, and a 1.94-mill tax for employee salaries and benefits. Both generate about $5.3 million for the school system's general fund budget.

The board has been collecting the two millages for 20 years and wants to renew the taxes for another 10 years.

One is a 2.9-mill tax to pay for additional teachers above the state allotment, and a 1.94-mill tax for employee salaries and benefits. Both generate about $5.3 million for the school system's general fund budget.

The board has been collecting the two millages for 20 years and wants to renew the taxes for another 10 years.

One is a 2.9-mill tax to pay for additional teachers above the state allotment, and a 1.94-mill tax for employee salaries and benefits. Both generate about $5.3 million for the school system's general fund budget.

The board has been collecting the two millages for 20 years and wants to renew the taxes for another 10 years.

One is a 2.9-mill tax to pay for additional teachers above the state allotment, and a 1.94-mill tax for employee salaries and benefits. Both generate about $5.3 million for the school system's general fund budget.

The board has been collecting the two millages for 20 years and wants to renew the taxes for another 10 years.

One is a 2.9-mill tax to pay for additional teachers above the state allotment, and a 1.94-mill tax for employee salaries and benefits. Both generate about $5.3 million for the school system's general fund budget.

The board has been collecting the two millages for 20 years and wants to renew the taxes for another 10 years.

One is a 2.9-mill tax to pay for additional teachers above the state allotment, and a 1.94-mill tax for employee salaries and benefits. Both generate about $5.3 million for the school system's general fund budget.

The board has been collecting the two millages for 20 years and wants to renew the taxes for another 10 years.

One is a 2.9-mill tax to pay for additional teachers above the state allotment, and a 1.94-mill tax for employee salaries and benefits. Both generate about $5.3 million for the school system's general fund budget.

The board has been collecting the two millages for 20 years and wants to renew the taxes for another 10 years.

One is a 2.9-mill tax to pay for additional teachers above the state allotment, and a 1.94-mill tax for employee salaries and benefits. Both generate about $5.3 million for the school system's general fund budget.

The board has been collecting the two millages for 20 years and wants to renew the taxes for another 10 years.

One is a 2.9-mill tax to pay for additional teachers above the state allotment, and a 1.94-mill tax for employee salaries and benefits. Both generate about $5.3 million for the school system's general fund budget.

The board has been collecting the two millages for 20 years and wants to renew the taxes for another 10 years.

One is a 2.9-mill tax to pay for additional teachers above the state allotment, and a 1.94-mill tax for employee salaries and benefits. Both generate about $5.3 million for the school system's general fund budget.