Louisiana's school systems face longer school days and a longer school year, effective in 1990-91, as a result of legislation that would be required to add a half hour of instructional time to meet minimum requirements, increasing the school day from 5.1 to 6 hours a day.

Students who now attend school 175 days would have to attend an additional two days. The school year for teachers would be lengthened from 180 days to 183 days.

The middle schools and high schools in East Baton Rouge Parish consist of seven periods of 50 minutes each.

Although teachers apparently will have to be paid extra for the additional days, it wasn't clear whether they would get any extra pay for spending an extra half hour in the classroom. Some teachers, however, have already agreed to the plan.
