‘Smash’ Cajun Night Is Held

International House Hosted
Music, Dance

November 29, 1965

The French-speaking Cajun people of Louisiana, known for their music and dance, held a special event to celebrate their heritage. The International House, a cultural center, organized a event that was a hit, attracting enthusiasts from around the region.

Crowds of the area danced to Cajun music, a style unique to Louisiana, at the event. The International House was filled to the brim, with people of all ages enjoying the music and the atmosphere.

The event was not just for Cajuns, but for anyone interested in learning about the culture. People who had never heard of Cajun music before came to experience it firsthand. The night was a perfect example of how culture can bring people together.

The music was provided by local Cajun bands, and the dance floor was filled with people enjoying the rhythm and energy of the music.

The event was a great success, and it is hoped that it will inspire others to learn about and celebrate the unique culture of the Cajun people.
