Family Pew Plaques May Bring New Coats Of Arms

By ALTON E. BOUSSARD

A new pew plaque project began this weekend when the Rev. A. M. Wassler, pastor of St. Peter’s Catholic Church, put out word that plaques may be ordered to honor family members and ancestors.

The plaques are to be hand-carved and include the original coats of arms of the family along with the name of the family member and the date of birth and death. The plaques will be placed in the pews of the church and will be visible to all who enter.

The plaques will be designed by an artist who will work with the family to create a unique design. The plaques will be made of wood and will be stained and varnished to protect them from the elements.

The Rev. Wassler said that the plaques will be a way for families to honor their ancestors and to pass on their heritage to future generations.

The plaques will be available in a variety of sizes and will be priced according to the complexity of the design. The Rev. Wassler said that the plaques will be a valuable addition to the church and will be a source of pride for the families who have them.

The plaques will be ordered on a first-come, first-served basis and will be available for a limited time. The Rev. Wassler said that families interested in placing plaques in their pews should contact the church office to begin the process.

The plaques will be installed by the Rev. Wassler and will be dedicated during an upcoming Sunday service. The plaques will be a permanent part of the church and will be visible to all who enter.

The Rev. Wassler said that the plaques will be a way for families to honor their ancestors, to pass on their heritage, and to create a lasting legacy for future generations.

The plaques will be a valuable addition to the church and will be a source of pride for the families who have them. The plaques will be available in a variety of sizes and will be priced according to the complexity of the design. The plaques will be ordered on a first-come, first-served basis and will be available for a limited time. The plaques will be installed by the Rev. Wassler and will be dedicated during an upcoming Sunday service. The plaques will be a permanent part of the church and will be visible to all who enter.