STUDY FRENCH NEEDS — Three Quebec government experts and technicians are in Louisiana to study the state's French educational needs and cultural activities. They are shown here being welcomed to Lafayette Wednesday after having been introduced by Sen. Dudley LeBlanc in the Legislature Wednesday. From left are: Harvey Paradis, Boucherville, Quebec languages authority; James Dornengeaux, chairman of the Council for the Development of French in Louisiana; Pierre Langevin, Quebec coordinator of federal-provincial relations; Homer Dyess, head of the foreign languages division, Louisiana Department of Education; and Jan Lobelle, director of the languages department at MacDonald College. (Advertiser Staff Photo)