A trapper supplements his income by grappling...

The Alligator

Although protected by law as to size Louisiana’s alligator, famed for the quality of its hide, still adds to the income of the trapper who invades its domain of swamps and marshes to perilously wrestle it out of its boggy den. Last year more than 18,000 of the reptiles were taken.