Village, Gardens Luring Tourists

The Village and gardens are a "must-see" for visitors to Lafayette. A tour of the Village gives one insight into the rich history of Acadian and Creole culture. The Village was built in 1935 by the Lafayette Civic Club, and now serves as a living museum that showcases traditional Louisiana architecture.

Old Acadian Architecture

These three early Acadian homes are examples. From left to right, they are the St. John House, Lafourche of St. John, and the Village of New Orleans.

Village Gives Look At Acadian Past

The Village is open to the public every day from 10:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. Admission is $2.00 for adults and $1.00 for children under 12. The Village is located at 3011 North MacArthur, Lafayette, Louisiana.

Chapel Built Through Area KC Efforts

The non-denominational chapel at Acadian Village is the product of a community effort from the Knights of Columbus and the Acadian Village Community Center. The building was started by the Knights and the Village Center in order to provide a place of worship for the community. The building itself is a simple structure, consisting of a large open space with a small stage at one end. The interior is decorated with simple, white curtains and a large cross at the front. The building is located at the intersection of two major roads, making it easily accessible to the community. It has been used for a variety of events, including religious services, community meetings, and social gatherings. The chapel is a symbol of the community's commitment to faith and service.
